The Blitz

Night filled the sky like lights being switched off.

Everything turned black.

Planes flew across the sky scattering bombs.

Buildings cried for help as they closed their eyes waiting for the bombs to stop.

Search lights scouted the skies for enemy planes.

Lights flashed as we closed our eyes.

Bombs exploded leaving nothing left in sight.

Walls wept as they crumbled onto the city that was once loved.

Planes filled the skies as it turned black and hearts broke.

The fear of death,

Piles of ash lay as houses crumbled smothered in smoke

Choking and suffocating innocents.

Broken hopes drifted through the memories.

German bombers glided across the night sky.

The air raid sirens scream then fade.

Teddy bears burned weeping for their owners.

Shattered dreams and broken hearts drifted into dust.

Death comes from above.
